It is very dangerous to meet DESI Community people in America in 2025. They will ask first your caste before they ask your first name. There ends the matter. The next is you BJP supporter or not? gone. Telugus ppl even worse.

An Indian-born U.S. citizen, who graduated from the "MIT of India," now finds themselves unable to compete with fresh H-1Bs!

Exposing the H-1B Hypocrisy: Even Indian-Americans Are Shut Out!

From [redacted]
To [redacted]

My experience with the H-1B racket is personal. I came to the U.S. decades ago, graduated from IIT, earned a U.S. degree in Statistics, and became a U.S. citizen—yet I was shut out of my own industry.

I sent hundreds of resumes to insurance companies. No callbacks. But every evening, I saw hundreds of H-1B workers walking home from work.

I applied for a contract role—an Indian recruiter dismissed me for being "too old." Yes, an Indian body shop discriminated against an American citizen. I reported it to the Dept. of Labor. Nothing happened.

The reality? The "best & brightest" narrative is a lie. Most H-1Bs today are average graduates with poor English & zero U.S. business knowledge. Merit? That died in the mid-1990s when the floodgates opened.

This isn't about skill. It's about replacing Americans—even ones of Indian origin—with a cheap, obedient workforce. H-1B is nothing but legalized discrimination."

America must BAN three caste groups immediately in the USA 🇺🇸.

1 Kammas

2 Kapus

3 Reddys.

These groups(of Telugu communities)are damaging of Americans jobs here.

I worked at the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, where American workers were replaced with H-1B hires.

The Port Authority's vendor, Pomeroy, was billing $132 per hour for American workers who were being paid $85 per hour.

Seeking to maximize profits, Pomeroy fired all

Dear Americans,

For the past 15 years, your tech jobs have been stolen — hijacked by a system that prioritizes cheap foreign labor over you.

Here's the ugly truth:

Starbuck is reportedly replacing American workers with H-1Bs

andhra_ip Posted 2 hours ago

Starbucks said it would lay off 1,100 corporate employees and not fill hundreds of open roles, part of new chief executive Brian Niccol's effort to streamline operations.

Niccol said in a message Monday that the cuts would remove corporate layers and duplications and would help the coffee company become more focused.

Starbucks has been struggling with a string of quarterly sales declines as customers have sought out cheaper coffee, or balked at long lines. Niccol has pledged to bring back the company's old cafe vibe in stores, speed up service and improve the mobile ordering experience.

As of September, Starbucks had 16,000 corporate employees, including those supporting store operations, store development, and roasting. The company said the layoffs wouldn't affect roasting, manufacturing, warehousing and distribution workers.

Cafe workers also wouldn't be affected by the cuts, Starbucks said.

The layoffs are among the largest rounds of cuts in Starbucks's history. In 2018, Starbucks said it would lay off 5% of its global corporate workforce, amounting to around 350 people.

Starbucks shares ticked up to $112.48 in morning trading.

Other restaurant chains have unveiled their own layoffs or restructuring moves recently. Bloomin' Brands said last week that it would lay off around 100 corporate employees in its Tampa, Fla.-based support center, or around 17% of the division's workforce.

Yum Brands said last week that it would no longer maintain a headquarters in Louisville, Ky., moving around 100 KFC employees to its Plano, Texas, office.

Starbucks said Monday that managers would reach out to affected workers by Tuesday and that they would receive severance and other transition assistance. The company asked hybrid workers to stay at home this week.

On Monday, the company said that future North American corporate hires would largely need to work in Seattle or Toronto, where Starbucks maintains a support office, as part of increasing expectations for in-office work.

Trust me, if you're an American or a U.S. citizen, securing a job in Information Technology can be nearly impossible due to dominance by a single caste.

The Indian caste system has severely undermined America's Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).
